Academic Title
Full Name	Katharine Fortin
Position	Ph.D. candidate
Profile text	The purpose of Katharine's NWO-funded research is to analyze the way in which human rights law can complement international humanitarian law and international criminal law in order to increase protection for those who suffer violence at the hands of armed groups in internal conflict. Before moving to the Netherlands in 2006, Katharine worked as a dispute resolution lawyer in London, specializing in high court litigation, arbitration and mediation. During her law training and law studies, Katharine worked for a broad range of national and international human rights organizations on a pro bono basis including the Council of Churches in Sierra Leone, The AIRE Centre, The Medical Foundation for Victims of Torture, UNHCR and the International Criminal Court. Katharine spent the year immediately prior to joining SIM working as the Associate Legal Officer in the Immediate Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Katharine graduated with a BA (Hons) from Oxford University in English Literature and English. She converted to law at City University in London in 2001 and after completing articles at Norton Rose, qualified as a solicitor in 2005. In 2006/7, she completed an LLM in International and European Human Rights law at Utrecht University. She graduated with a Summa cum Laude and was awarded the Thesis off the Shelf prize for her thesis on sexual violence.
