

EU attitudes: antecedents, structure and consequences

Claes de Vreese (UvA)

Public attitudes towards the European Union are probably more multi-dimensional than many researchers initially thought. What are the dimensions of EU attitudes? What explains the variation in EU attitudes and what are the consequences of EU attitudes? Using unique survey data from the Netherlands and the 2009 European Election Campaign these questions will be addressed.

Claes H. de Vreese is Professor and Chair of Political Communication and Scientific Director of The Amsterdam School of Communication Research ASCoR at the University of Amsterdam. He is the founding Director of the Center for Politics and Communication (www.polcomm.org). He is also Adjunct Professor of Political Science and Journalism at the University of Southern Denmark. His research interests include comparative journalism research, the effects of news, public opinion and European integration, effects of information and campaigning on elections, referendums and direct democracy. His research is funded by several science foundation grants, including Veni and Vici grants from the Dutch Science Foundation, as well as grants from the EU research programs. He has received awards for research from the International Communication Association, the Danish Science Foundation, and the Norwegian Holberg Foundation. He is a member of the Young Academy of the Royal Dutch Academy of Sciences (KNAW). He has published more than 60 articles in international peer-reviewed journals, including Communication Research, Journal of Politics, Journalism Studies, Political Communication, Journal of Communication, Public Opinion Quarterly, International Journal of Public Opinion Research, Scandinavian Political Studies, European Journal of Communication, West European Politics, European Union Politics, Journalism & Mass Communication Quarterly, Mass Communication & Society, and European Journal of Political Research.

For more info see www.claesdevreese.com