Collection LBENG: English linguistics and literature

Collection

The collection English (LB-ENG) consists of three sections: general, literature and linguistics. Apart from this, the library has a substantial number of specialist periodicals in subscription. In the general section (18.03) you will find reference works and bibliographies in the field of English language and literature, such as The year’s work in English studies.

The literature section is subdivided into English literature (18.05), Anglo-American literature (18.06) and English literature from outside Europe and the United States (18.07). These sections are largely arranged chronologically by period. Within English literature, the important sections are Old and Middle English and the Renaissance. There are separate sections for Chaucer and Shakespeare. Other highlights in the collection are (studies about) eighteenth century literature and twentieth century literature (comprising modernism, Joyce, Beckett). Contemporary primary literature is acquired selectively.

Within Anglo-American literature the accent is on the twentieth century. There is a substantial amount of material relating to Afro-American literature, modernism and postmodernism. Literature outside Europe and the United States is a small collection, with mainly Canadian and Australian literature. More general and theoretical works are to be found in the collection LBALW (Literary studies).

The English linguistics collection starts at the section number 18.04. Literature in the field of general linguistics can be found in the collection LBATW (General Linguistics).
