Collection KUN: Art history

Collection

The collection covers the history of Western art including architecture from Classical antiquity up to the present. For literature on miniature painting and book illumination see the collection DOC (Book and Manuscript Studies).

Within the Art history collection the following general sections can be distinguished: theory and method of art history (20.01-20.04), theory of art (20.05-20.09), art and society (20.10-20.19), iconology, iconography and emblems (20.20-20.23), art history overviews and studies (20.30-20.70).

Apart from this, there are several sections dedicated to individual art media: painting (21.00), drawing (21.20), printing (21.30), photography (21.40), sculpture (21.50), architecture (21.60-21.70) and decorative arts (21.80). Besides, there are sections with monographic studies about and oeuvre catalogues of individual artists, and with collection, exhibition and auction catalogues.

Focal points in the collection are: text editions in the field of art history and art theory (the Kunstliteratur); art theory, the methodology and history of art history, iconology, emblematics (both text editions and secondary literature), Nachleben (the influence of classical antiquity on western art and art history). Besides, the history of art and architecture in the Northern and Southern Netherlands of the middle ages, the art of painting, drawing and printing after the middle ages, Italian renaissance art and finally the history of patronage and collecting, and the reception of Dutch art.

As a result of the cultural-historical bias of the iconological method in the broad sense of the term, characteristic of the Utrecht approach to the history of art, works from adjacent subject areas were also acquired: the 'auxiliary sciences' such as history, literature (particularly texts) and theology. Nowadays 'auxiliary sciences' are acquired only in so far as they pertain to the humanities, and for other collections in the University library.
