

Nomination procedure for the Utrecht Young Academy

The Utrecht Young Academy (UYA) forms an energetic, active, independent, and interdisciplinary academy within Utrecht University, where excellent young Utrecht-based scholars (between 0 and 8 years after receiving their PhD degrees)¹ can openly connect, interact, and exchange critical perspectives on academic policy and society in Utrecht and beyond. The UYA launched with 24 members in November of 2016. Members are appointed for a period of 5 years. Each year additional 8 members will join.

Who are we looking for?

The UYA is looking for 8 excellent young UU-scholars (between 0 and 8 years after receiving their PhD degrees)¹. There is a preference for individuals who have not (yet) had a leadership position within a large research group. Members are mostly in an earlier stage in their career than members of De Jonge Akademie of the KNAW. UYA members think 'outside the box', have a broad vision on research and education, and are motivated to actively organise and participate in UYA events. In general members should be willing to invest two to four hours per week in UYA activities.

Selection procedure

In odd-numbered years, deans, education vice-deans, directors of strategic programmes, and PhD-councils may submit 3 nominations each. In addition, UYA alumni and members of De Jonge Akademie of the KNAW in Utrecht may nominate 2 candidates throughout their academic career at Utrecht University. In even years, young scholars may nominate themselves.

UYA aims to have a diverse representation of academics in its group of members. Diversity encompasses for UYA a number of aspects, such as, but not limited to: academic, cultural background, ethnicity, nationality, gender identity and sexuality. Our aim with this approach is to increase the participation of individuals from underrepresented groups in academia.

Also, UYA endorses the broader recognition and rewarding of academic activities as elaborated within the framework of Open Science and the vision on Recognition and Rewards at Utrecht University. In making the selection we will also take the candidate's role in the Open Science debate and vision on Recognition and Rewards into consideration.

In the second round, approximately 15 candidates will be invited for an interview. The interviews will cover candidates' passion for academic research and education, their motivation to be an active member within the UYA, their ideas for UYA activities, and their thoughts on themes such as diversity in academia, inter-/multidisciplinary collaboration, internationalization and organization of academic research and teaching, public relevance of science and scholarship. The selection committee strives towards a proportional representation of alpha-, beta- and gamma disciplines within UYA as well as a balanced representation in relation to gender and other forms of diversity. The detailed selection procedure can be found in the attached selection regulations.

The nomination

Nominations should include the nomination form and a CV as a separate attachment (properly labelled with the candidates' first and last names). It furthermore asks for activities and vision of the candidate in the field of academia and society, as well as their experiences and vision in relation to internationalisation and inter- and multidisciplinary in research and education. Finally, we ask for activities that the candidate would like to undertake within the context of the UYA.

The deadline for submitting nominations: 25 November 2022. The interviews will take place on 16 and 17 of January 2023 (request for nominated candidates to keep these dates free).
