Collection LBITA: Italian linguistics and literature

Collection

The collection comprises nearly 15,000 volumes and covers the whole field of Italian language and culture, from the middle ages to the present. The collection consists of Linguistics, Literature and 'Italy' sections, dictionaries and reference works

The linguistics collection contains material specifically dealing with the Italian language. Within this division there is a large dialectology section.

The literature collection (18.29) contains a large number of texts and studies in the field of Italian literature. The general sections contain bibliographies and reference works as well as studies on literary genres, studies on literary themes and motives, and general publications on Italian literary history.

A large part of the collection is arranged chronologically by period. The studies on the middle ages and on twentieth century periods and movements are of particular interest. Important highlights in the collection are the extensive collection Dante books and the beautiful series of texts by the Primo Novecento futurists. Works of a more general literary-theoretical nature can be found in the Literary Studies collection (LBALW).
